

Eco-Fiction:

Also known as eco-literature, these books can be utopian or dystopian and fall in any genre from sci-fi to thrillers or even westerns. They all share strong environmental themes that reflect important connections, dependencies, and interactions between people and their natural environments.

- Atwood, Margaret
 - Butler, Octavia E.
 - Caffall, Eiran
 - Christie, Michael
 - Cook, Diane
 - Enger, Leif
 - Haigh, Jennifer
 - Kingsolver, Barbara
 - Kingsolver, Barbara
 - Mbue, Imbolo
 - McConaghy, Charlotte
 - McConaghy, Charlotte
 - McConaghy, Charlotte
 - Nagamatsu, Sequoia
 - Powers, Richard
 - Robinson, Kim Stanley
- MaddAddam Trilogy
The Parable of The Sower
All the Water of the World
Greenwood
The New Wilderness
I Cheerfully refuse
Heat and Light
Flight Behavior
Prodigal Summer
How Beautiful We Were Migrations
Once There Were Wolves
Wild Dark Shore
How High We Go in the Dark
The Overstory
The Ministry for the Future

Young Adult Fiction

- Crossan, Sarah
 - Dimaline, Cherie
 - Pfeffer, Susan Beth
 - Pfeffer, Susan Beth
 - Roanhorse, Rebecca
 - Shusterman, Neal
- Breathe
The Marrow Thieves
Life as We Knew It
This World We Live In
Trail of Lightening
Dry